Broad and Narrow Alley, which is included in the Chengdu Historical and Cultural Protection Project list, is made up of broad, narrow, and across alleys, among which there are many traditional courtyards or siheyuan.

Some very old Chengdu alleys where some notable people once lived. Officers and the members of the Eight Flags are significant individuals. The Broad and Narrow Alley was rebuilt in response to public demand, and today is one of Chengdu's most popular tourist attractions. With the growth of the Qing Dynasty, the courtyards within the alleys were quite well built. But in the late Qing Dynasty, the lanes were built using western-styled architecture, and during the Republic of China, certain noble families took over ownership of the courtyards. As a result, the alleys' current structure has been in place ever since.

Since the alleys were so unnoticeable, they have been lowered. Shao City's southern region was not a nice place to live and was not connected to any public transportation. We may argue that this region was neglected during the building of the city. The city walls, the imperial city, and the majority of the city's architecture have all vanished. These days, Broad and Narrow Alley appears to be shouldering burdens that it shouldn't. It is only left in Broad and Narrow Alley that the old Chengdu may still be seen. People only realized the alley's usefulness after it was discovered. Reconstruction work on the alley began in 2003, and it was progressively made public after that.

People can now be seen on the streets of Chengdu drinking tea, eating street food, and enjoying the amusement of many local and passing tourists. The most vibrant location in the city, in the alleys, and on the pier to enjoy the passing of time in small alleys, is width alley, which is now an internationalization vision of the global hub of trend. There are several historical, cultural, and natural landmarks in and around Chengdu, which is a large but laid-back city.
